VINOS URUGUAYOS

Uruguayan Wines

El vino de Uruguay es cultivado en tierras particularmente adecuadas para el cultivo de la vid. Situado en la misma latitud que las mejores áreas cultivables de Argentina, Chile, Sudáfrica y Australia –entre 30° y 35° sur- es posible cultivarla en todo su territorio.

Las primeras cepas llegaron a la Banda Oriental de la mano de los colonizadores españoles. Ellos la plantaron, junto al olivo y al nogal a mediados del siglo XVII, dando comienzo a la historia del vino en el país.

En Uruguay se cultiva la vid en un clima de tipo templado, con temperaturas promedio de 18°C, precipitaciones promedio anuales de 1055mm, sol, inviernos fríos y veranos cálidos y secos, de noches frescas.

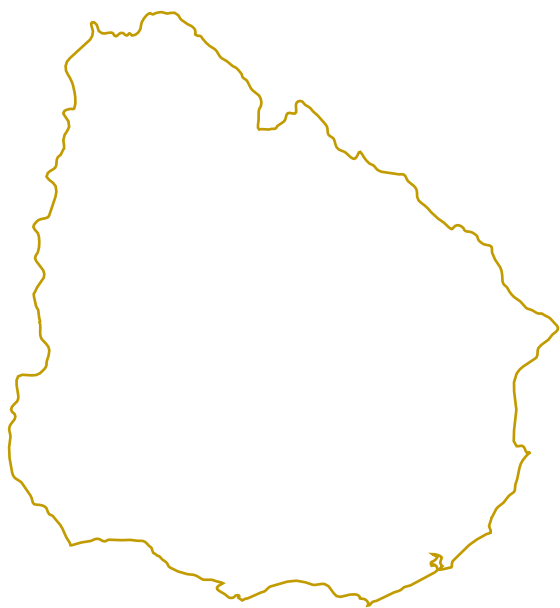

Oficialmente existen nueve zonas vitivinícolas: el Norte, el Litoral Norte, el Noreste, el Litoral Sur, la zona Central, y Central Este, el Sudoeste, el Sur y el Sudeste.

Uruguayan wine is grown on land particularly suitable for growing grapes. Located in the same latitude as the best cultivable areas of Argentina, Chile, South Africa and Australia -between 30 ° and 35 ° south- it is possible to cultivate the vine in all its territory.

The first strains came to the Banda Oriental from the hand of the Spanish colonizers. They planted the vine, next to the olive tree and the walnut tree in the mid-seventeenth century, giving beginning to the history of wine in the country.

In Uruguay the vine is cultivated in a climate of temperate type, with average temperatures of 18 ° C, average annual rainfall of 1055mm, sun, cold winters and hot, dry summers, of cool nights.

Officially there are nine wine regions: the North, the North Coast, the Northeast, the South Coast, the Central Zone, and the Central East, the Southwest, the South and the Southeast.
